Your secrets aren't safe with me

INDUSTRY events held after 7pm, such as gala dinners at the end of a long conference, always provide plenty of fodder for Outsider. You see, scandal is rife, secrets spilled and dance moves unleashed when alcohol is added to the mix. That is why Outsider never turns down an invitation to an evening event – it's where he gets his best material!

However, an invitation to a masquerade charity ball the Association of Financial Advisers is co-hosting in Brisbane this Saturday night has him in two minds.

On the one hand, he is concerned that the fact masks are a requirement for this night, which is also being hosted by the MS Society of Queensland, means identities are protected, making his job a lot harder.

On the other hand, there is no denying that a journalist in disguise is like a wolf in sheep's clothing.

So, after weighing up these two factors, Outsider thinks it's in his best interest to attend the Audi AFA MSquerade Ball, but warns other partygoers that while their identities may remain a mystery, their secrets may not!
